LESSON 1 - INTRODUCTION

I. Pretest

II. Historical Introduction

1. From the following verses in Judges summarize the political and spiritual condition of the people of Israel as the book of I Samuel opens:
   2:1-2
   3:7-8, 12
   4:1-2
   6:1
   10:6-7
   13:1
   19:29-30
   21:25

2. What are some similarities between our own society and the people of Israel during this period in history?

III. Overview of I Samuel

   The book of I Samuel is a book of history as are the books that precede it and the books that follow it. At this point, Israel is at a point of transition. Just as the book of Ruth closes with the birth of Obed to Ruth and Boaz, the book of I Samuel opens with the record of another Israelite woman desperately seeking to have a child. Jehovah blesses Hannah with a son, whom she in turn dedicates to God’s service. Samuel, who serves as both prophet and judge, is the last in the line of judges chosen by God to deliver Israel from various surrounding enemies. He goes on to lead the nation from being a theocracy to a monarchy, anointing and counseling its first kings as directed by God.

   Skim through I Samuel and list the main characters and events in these sections:

   Chapter 1  Samuel’s Birth
   Chapters 2-3  Samuel’s Faithful Service and Special Call
   Chapters 4-7  Samuel’s Leadership of Israel
   Chapters 8-12  Transition to Monarchy
   Chapters 13-16  God’s Rejection of Saul
   Chapters 17-31  Saul’s Rebellion Against God

IV. Major Themes in I Samuel

   Read Hannah’s prayer in I Samuel 2:1-10. Although we can see how parts of this prayer relate to her specific situation, there is more to the content of her song than merely her own experience. Make a list of lessons that are taught in this prayer and a list of examples of how those lessons are demonstrated in life. If you can, use examples from the stories in I Samuel wherever possible.
